A Word From Prime Time

Celebrate National Summer Learning Day with Prime Time
#KeepKidsLearning

Join Prime Time for National Summer Learning Day on Thursday, July 14, 2016

Do you have activities planned for your summer camp on Thursday, July 14, 2016?

Prime Time Palm Beach County invites your summer campers to enter its National Summer Learning Day Literary Art Contest. Here how it works:

RESERVE: A kit with books to read with your campers, recycled items and a canvas. Contact Paola Cedeno to reserve your kit at pcedeno@primetimepb.org and schedule a time for pick up or delivery.

READ: The books (different reading levels provided) with your campers.

RECREATE: Have your campers re-create scenes or characters from the book on to one single large montage with recycled materials provided to your campers.

Please take photos of the children working on their montage (provided you have their photo release forms) and a photo of your completed montage and email them to Katie Olavarria at kolavarria@primetimepb.org by close of business on Thursday, July 14, 2016.

Please share photos from this day on social media (tag Prime Time and use #keepkidslearning) to promote National Summer Learning Day on July 14, 2016 and its message to keep children learning and maintaining a healthy, active lifestyle during the summer months.

The contest winners will be announced in Prime Time's Friday Forecast on Friday, July 22, 2016. Two winning camps will be awarded checks in the amount of $100.00 from Prime Time to assist with summer program expenses.

Should you have any questions, please contact Paola Cedeno at pcedeno@primetimepb.org.

Prime Time thanks the Literacy Coalition of Palm Beach County and Resource Depot for their partnership and generous donations for this contest.

Public Libraries and Effective Summer Learning Opportunities for Assessment

The Urban Libraries Council (ULC) recently released a new report, Public Libraries and Effective Summer Learning: Opportunities for Assessment and executive summary.

The new report documents ideas exchanged by leaders from both inside and outside the library field at the National Forum on Effective Summer Learning in Libraries.

It highlights ways in which public libraries are evolving summer programming and exploring practices to assess effectiveness in achieving learning outcomes.

This work gives library leaders strategic concepts, emerging models and tangible action steps to initiate assessment of their summer learning programs, all of which are featured in the report.

Because of this work, education and youth development leaders across the country will have important conversations about the role of libraries in expanding summer learning opportunities that address the summer learning slide.

The report also provides the opportunity to engage your local government officials, partners and funders on the importance of libraries' summer learning leadership and their impact on improving the lives of youth.
