High-Risk Indicators for Intimate Partner Homicide Institute (1.5 days)

Please join us for our 1.5-day virtual training institute, presented by the Florida Department of Children and Families in partnership with Citrus County Abuse Shelter Association, Inc, focuses on the relationship between high-risk factors and intimate partner homicide. High-risk indicators of potential danger including stalking/cyberstalking, strangulation, and sexual violence, provide opportunities to prevent intimate partner homicides before a lethal event occurs. Trends in domestic violence fatality review and culturally specific risk factors will also be discussed. The goal of this institute is to ensure criminal justice professionals are well-equipped with the knowledge to effectively identify risk factors within their various disciplines that perpetuate violence to ensure perpetrator accountability and survivor safety. The intended audience is stakeholders in the criminal justice process including law enforcement, judges, and court staff.

Learning objectives

Attendees will describe the relationship between stalking/ cyberstalking, strangulation and sexual violence and the potential for intimate partner homicide.

Attendees will describe culturally specific high-risk indicators.

Attendees will develop strategies for perpetrator accountability and survivor safety when high-risk indicators are present.
